A TVA Complaint in Mississippi

Municipal Plant Has to Make a Profit

Apparently the coming of public power into the Mid-South of the lines of the Tennessee Valley Authority hasn't made life entirely a bed of roses. There is the following critical note in the editorial columns of the West Point Times Leader, published at West Point, Miss., by my friend Edgar G. Harris:

"The ad valorem tax rate of the City of West Point has been advanced from 25 to 26 mills. If your assessment is $1,000, your ad valorem taxes will be $11 more this year. If your assessment is $10,000, then you will pay the city $110 more than you did last year.

"Before the coming of TVA, the City of West Point was netting about $22,000 a year from the municipally-owned utilities.

"Under TVA rates this profit has been largely dissipated, and local taxpayers must make up the difference."

What has happened in West Point, apparently is that in putting into effect the TVA's cheap industrial electric rates the municipal plant has allowed domestic consumer rates to go so low that the municipal plant's operating profit has been wiped out—resulting in a necessary increase in the property tax rate.

TVA's great purpose is to make available cheap power for the industrial development of the South. But no one should lose sight of this important truth—that industrial rates are one thing, and domestic rates are quite another. Cheap electric power has the ability to create industry where no industry existed before. And cheap industrial rates are justified because they create new jobs for many men—but domestic consumer rates are governed solely by what the citizens wish to make of their municipal plant.

Cheap industrial power has come to West Point and other towns in Mississippi, and sooner or later it will come to Hope—but let us not make the mistake of jeopardizing the future of the municipal plant while experimenting with cheap power rates.

An industry may demand and get power at vastly cheaper rates than the individual home-owner pays, because industry here is in competition with industry elsewhere. And the fact that the home-owner and his neighbors control the municipal plant that sells industry and domestic consumer alike can't alter this fact.

Here in Hope we have an isolated municipal plant generating and distributing power to its own citizens. The coming of inter-connected public power, such as TVA, would make available very cheap industrial power rates in Hope, and would afford some reduction in domestic rates—but we do not want to make the mistake of which West Point, Miss., is complaining.

Our idea of a municipal plant is that it shall more or less pay the cost of running the city government and its necessary public improvements from year to year. Hope's plant has been an outstanding success, and we would wish that it always remained so.

In Europe there have always been certain government monopolies which helped to offset the cost of ad valorem taxation. Some governments held a public monopoly of tobacco. Some held a public monopoly of the manufacture of matches. And in olden times there was a government monopoly of the sale of salt.

Hope is simply committed to the theory that the municipal water & light plant shall carry the load of local government.

A sound policy—one we should never desert.

Decay at the Core

Every large city in the United States, and some not so large, face some problem, says Frederick L. Ackerman, New York architect and planner. Their course has run along this line:

First, a spectacular growth during the first 30 years of this century, until more than half of the American population was living in the cities. Then the rate of urban growth declined, and in some cities the actual population is declining. From the expanding central area now moves a continual migration of people to the suburbs and even the country.

There are many reasons for this migration, but they boil down to this: many people weary of the comparison and found that life was better farther out. Whereupon the congested urban area stagnated still further and became a "problem area."

We are now, Ackerman says, in a replacement era, the original development era having played out. He believes that cities must seize that period of replacement to redevelop the stagnated central areas into the most desirable residence districts of the city.

But that sort of development will no longer take care of itself. The cities grew by themselves, without direction or plan. But the replacement era will not work that way. It must be planned.

High valuation due to overhauling capitalization stands in the way of private efforts to accomplish such rebuilding. Ackerman puts it thus: "We have built our cities under guidance of the same economic fallacy which accounts for the plight of our railroads. We failed to extinguish their capitalizations at rates corresponding to physical decay and obsolescence, whichever was the higher. In a world of unprecedented advance stood firm against change, either in respect to physical plan or fiscal policy, both of which are obsolete."

Such changes sound like a Spartan remedy, but no city which has a "blighted section" at its center can afford to see that heart of the city go to seed without making strenuous efforts to meet the problem before it is too late.

Auction Trade Day Favored by Merchants

Will Undertake to Set Up Co-operative Monthly Farmers' Auction

A monthly Farmers' Auction and Trades Day following the general plan of the event that has run every month for 14 years at DeQueney was endorsed at a public meeting of Hope merchants held in the city hall Thursday night under the auspices of the Promotion Committee of Hope Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Vincent Foster, Junior C. of C. President, presided.

George W. Robinson, Oscar Greenberg and A. E. Stonequist were named as a committee to obtain signatures in the forming of a merchant co-operative which will promote and manage the event in Hope.

It is planned to hold the event the first Monday of every month. As outlined, the plan provides that the stores sign up for an all-expense-free of $4 a month, which would cover the following activities: Hiring an auctioneer, promoting advertising over the Hope trade territory, and paying for a dinner, barbecue or other "feed" once a month, immediately after the auction.

Farmers would be invited to bring in old household articles and farm implements and take advantage of the merchants' free auction event, which would be held on the sidewalk along some vacant lot in or near the downtown district. If it can be organized in time the plan would be put into effect the first Monday in July, depending on a later report from the committee after conferring with all the merchants.

There were 18 men present at the city hall meeting Thursday night, with 11 individual retail stores represented.

Those attending were: Ted Jones, Royce Smith, G. A. Hobbs, Guy Card, A. H. Washburn, A. E. Stonequist, George W. Robinson, Oscar Greenberg, Lamar Cox, Bernard O'Steen, Dewey Baber, Vincent Foster, Lyman Armstrong, Herbert Burns, C. C. Lewis, K. J. Caplinger, B. E. McMahon and George Churchman.

Funny Things in Washington

National Defense Increases Capital Police 50 %

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—The capital is a funny place. When the Interior Department wanted 1,800 tons of aluminum cable to run over the Cascade mountains, the department couldn't get it without going through the red tape of clearing through priorities.

The cable was wanted to carry high tension power leads to a new Washington state factory to make aluminum.

National defense has increased the Capital police force about 50 per cent. It now costs $155,680 a year to guard the Capital and $117,360 more to guard the house and senate office buildings.

Every week, William P. Lambertson, R-Kans., and vigorous opponent of the administration, writes into the Congressional Record a little column of satirical or biting humor. He never had explained why until the other day, when he told the house: "I apologize to my colleagues for the little column that I put in the Record every week. I am doing it just because Ramsey Black, third assistant postmaster, said that I could not frank them out."

The only failure the President admits in eight long years is his effort to move up Thanksgiving day. It is the only time he has been up against a higher power.

The house of representatives restaurant has been losing about $1,800 a month—but the congressmen and management will hasten to tell you that it is not because they get their food there any cheaper than any other place could get it in any chop house serving similar food.

It's because during those short one-

May Lower Age of Draftees

Senate Committee Approves Age Limit of 28

WASHINGTON —(AP)—The senate military affairs committee Friday approved an amendment to the selective service act authorizing the President to defer induction into the army draftees who have reached their 28th birthdays.

The provision was adopted by a vote of 5-3 over the opposition of Chairman Reynolds and two others. Senator Curney said the effect of the legislation as drafted would be to permit the President to exercise his discretion as to order deferment of service of draftees as each reached his 28th birthday.

U. S. to Take Foreign Ships

Will Seize 80 Vessels Idle in American Waters

WASHINGTON —(AP)—President Roosevelt Friday signed legislation permitting the government to take over and operate approximately 80 foreign ships now idle in U. S. waters.

Immediately thereafter he ordered the Maritime Committee to carry out the terms of the act.

Mr. Roosevelt said he did not know how many ships would be seized and also did not know whether any French ships would be included.

The administration measure provided that the government can acquire by requisition or purchase or may charter the ships for the duration of the emergency.

"Fair compensation will be made to owners but the funds paid will be held in the treasury for possible application against foreign debt to this country," Roosevelt said.

College Group Arrives Here

University Students to Study at Experiment Station

Approximately 30 students of the College of Agriculture's senior class of the University of Arkansas on a week's tour in company with Professors R. J. Hall and Phillip L. Kelley will arrive at Hope on the afternoon of June 6. The young agricultural leaders will be the guests of the Junior Chamber of Commerce while in Hope and provisions have been made to spend the night in the recreational area at the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station.

George Robison, Vincent Foster, and members of the Junior Chamber of Commerce have made the necessary provisions for entertaining the group while in the community.

The young visitors will study the results of the various experiments on the Fruit & Truck Branch Experiment Station and agricultural activities in the Hope community under the direction of George W. Ware, assistant director, in charge of the Experiment Station.

Dutch Deliver Unfavorable Reply to Japs

Japanese Minister Says Tokyo to Find Trade Terms Unsatisfactory

BATAVIA, Netherlands East Indies —(AP)—The Dutch delivered such an unfavorable reply to Japanese demands for a large share of the Indies exports of war materials, rubber, tin and oil, that the chief of the Japanese delegation indicated Friday he was not prepared to break off negotiations summarily—as he had intimated beforehand.

After receiving a 10-page memorandum in a 90-minute conference, Ken-ichi Woshizawa, chief of the Japanese delegation, said it was "disappointing" and that he did not think Tokyo would find it "satisfactory."

Although previous negotiations were teetering on the precipice, with implications of danger to "friendly relations" unless the Dutch substantially bowed to Japanese wishes, Woshizawa said he would have to study the reply more closely.

Soldier Drive Fund Near Top

Will Reach $760 Quota Spragins, McMath Tell Rotary

Hempstead county's drive to raise $760 of the more than 10 million dollars sought to establish recreational clubs near all American Army camps, has been successful, C. C. Spragins, county chairman, and Syd McMath, treasurer, told Hope Rotary club at its Friday noon luncheon in Hotel Barlow.

Mr. Spragins, thanking all campaign solicitors for their canvass Wednesday and Thursday, introduced Mr. McMath, who reported that he now has $680 in cash, with an additional $80 or so in reported but undelivered collections from outlying points. "We are safe in saying that with last-minute returns the county has gone over the top," he concluded.

Last-minute donors may leave their contributions to the United Service Organizations fund at either Citizens National or First National banks.

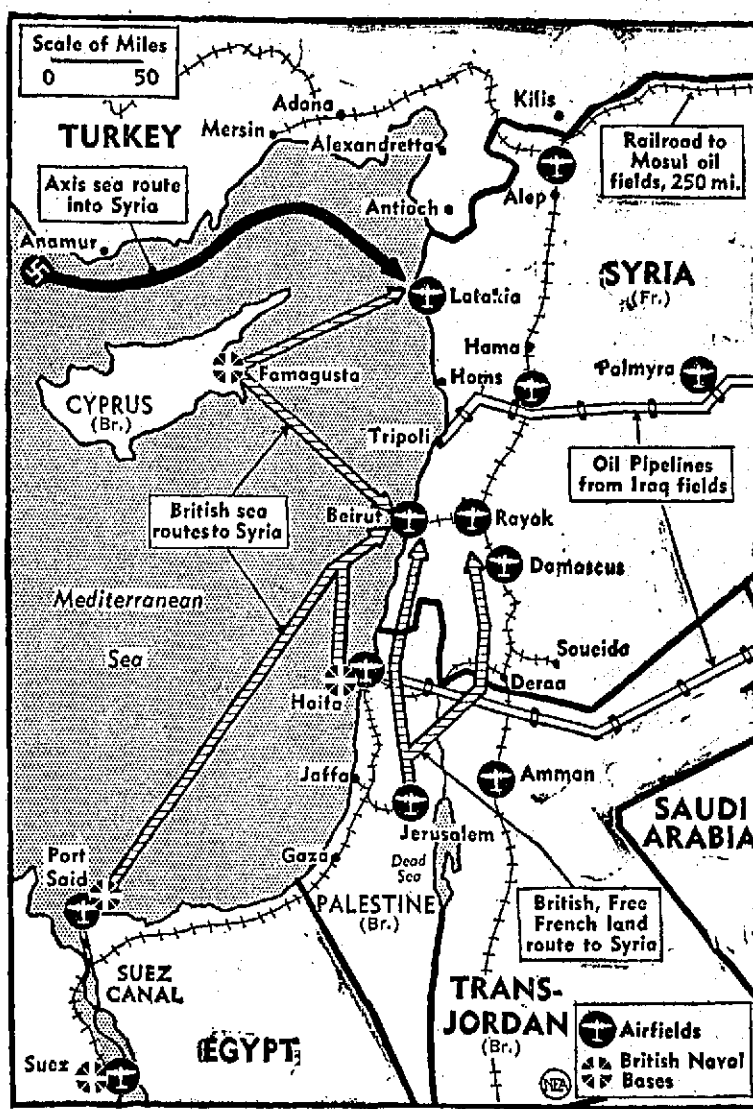

Guests at the Rotary club Friday were: Mr. McMath, Clarence Smith of Little Rock, and A. B. Webberington, superintendent of Blewett schools. Ted Jones led the club singing.

Move to Bottle Up British Fleet Seen

Italians Bomb Gibraltar; Germans Sense British Syria Attack

By the Associated Press.

Italian bombers were reported Friday to have attacked Britain's strong hold of Gibraltar, guarding the western entrance of the Mediterranean sea while the Germans forecast aerial blows at the Suez canal in the East.

This was linked with Wednesday night's raid on the main British naval base at Alexandria and reports indicated an Axis drive to bottle up the British fleet was in motion.

The London radio said casualties at Alexandria were 150 killed and 200 wounded.

Amid indications that British troops might move into French Syria at any moment NBC's correspondent in Turkey said that German troops had occupied Damascus, Syrian capital, 60 miles from British Trans-Jordan.

Both the French and German governments deny the presence of Nazis in Damascus.

Sense British Attack
A German radio reported from Beirut that British forces were preparing to land on the north Syrian coast and attack from Palestine and Trans-Jordan.

In London the press warned that Britain's position in the Middle East was grave and clamored for immediate action.

Britain's former war secretary, Leslie Hore-Belisha, in a speech bitterly assailing Prime Minister Churchill's conduct of the war, told an audience at Edinburgh, Scotland:

"We must win this war and back our government that will go to the end to win."

"We must realize the 1941 war can't be won at 1914 pace."

Belisha proposed the recognition of common citizenship by Britain and the United States as the "most hopeful assurance of determination for a new order."

"I simply ask you—the marshal of Damascus—to maintain our possession of territory belonging to us or entrusted to our protection; nothing more and nothing less."

That's What Dressmakers Need Says Hochman

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Editor

NEW YORK — Labor leader Julius Hochman has bristled eyebrows like John L. Lewis, but it annoys him when people notice the resemblance.

He is, after all, a labor personality. He broke precedents when, as general manager of the dress-makers union, he demanded from industry not increased wages, but increased efficiency and modern promotion. He argued that the dress industry was "sick," and that it was to the interest of the workers as much as the bosses to restore it to health.

Now a million-and-a-half dollar campaign is under way to promote New York as the "fashion center of the world."

He Wants Ice Water

On the efficiency side, Mr. Hochman, at the moment is attempting to get tanks of ice water installed in all workrooms—before August 15. That date is the deadline for a number of reforms. Besides ice water, Mr. Hochman wants better sewing machines for dress factories, better ventilation, better bookkeeping systems.

"I never lost a campaign, I never failed to accomplish an objective," he asserts.

He rather enjoys being called dynamic. And he says, "I realize that all labor leaders must resign themselves to being called either 'cute' or 'racketeers'."

"But I hope that the campaign we have under way will convince capital that we are anything but racketeers. Our interests are identical with those of capital."

Mr. Hochman is an old hand at precedent-breaking. He was born in Russia, like some other labor leaders, but not of poor parents. He rants against Communism, insisting that it cannot fit in America. He had little schooling—he worked as a tailor from the time he was 11 years old—yet his interests are wide. He enjoys literature, music, and the theater. He is forever trying to widen the cultural horizon of laborers. He was the moving spirit behind the Labor Stage of "Pins and Needles" fame.

He Works All Night

Mr. Hochman sometimes works all through the day and night for weeks on end. He makes appointments for midnight, for 2 a. m. for 4 a. m. He smokes incessantly. Then, when the particular job is done, he goes off to the country to rest and take pills.

The pills (several kinds) are supposed to be taken daily. But in the rush of business he forgets all about them, then, remembering, grabs a hand full out of each box and takes them all at once.

"You don't seem very enthusiastic, professor, about my daughter's chances of becoming a singer. Surely she has some possibilities!"

"Well, yah . . . she's got a mouth."

Christians Should Fight World Evils
Without Resorting to Hate and Malice
Text: Acts 12:25-13:12

By WILLIAM E. GILROY, D. D.
Editor of Advance

The disciples at Antioch, the first to be called "Christians," were quick to show the reality of their Christianity. When word came of the poverty and distress of saints in the home church at Jerusalem, these Christians at Antioch immediately took up a contribution for their relief. This was probably the first of the many enterprises of relief which have been undertaken in the Christian spirit, and which have been so widely organized and conducted in our modern world.

Relief of distress at a distance was then not so easily effected as it is today. There was no way of quickly sending funds, so Barnabas and the new convert, Paul, were commissioned to go to Jerusalem with the money. This they did, and after fulfilling their mission, returned to Antioch, bringing with them a young man, John Mark, who was destined to have an important career in the early Christian movement.

The home of his mother, Mary, in Jerusalem seemed to be a center for the circle of disciples, and it was here that Peter came when he was released from prison, as the story is told in the twelfth chapter of Acts.

It is John Mark's name that is associated with our second Gospel. He was undoubtedly a very fine young man and a great strength to the Christian movement, but apparently he did not measure up fully to the rigorous standards of Paul. We find later (Acts 15:37-40) that Paul and Barnabas had a sharp contention about him when Barnabas wanted to take him with them on their second missionary journey.

Paul refused, believing that John Mark had left them unjustifiably at one point in their former journey. The result was that Paul and Barnabas separated and Paul took Silas with him as his companion. Here in our lesson, however, we are concerned with the first missionary journey of Paul and Barnabas.

From Antioch they went to Seleucia, the port of Antioch, whence they sailed about 80 miles to the island of Cyprus. Our lesson is taken up chiefly with an incident concerning Sergius Paulus, an important official, described as "a man of understanding." He was interested in hearing Barnabas and Paul, and in discovering the truth that they had to declare, but a sorcerer and false prophet who had taken the name of Elymas, interfered and sought to prevent the truth. Paul denounced him, and this evil man was stricken with temporary blindness.

Paul evidently did not act in a vengeful spirit, and it is quite possible that some traditional element has entered into the story. Nevertheless, it is instructive in its implication that there are real enemies of truth and right who have to be recognized as such and denounced and fought for what they are. The Christian doctrine and practice of love for one's enemies does not mean that there are not enemies, or that the way of love means a way of compromise with evil.

It does mean that Christians even in fighting evil and evil-doers cannot act with malice or with any thought of vengeance if they would act as Christians.

CHURCH OF CHRIST
J. A. Copeland, Minister

On the Third Sunday, which is June 15, our Revival will begin, with Eld C. M. Stubblefield of Arkadelphia, doing the preaching.

Brother Stubblefield is an unusual Bible scholar, and has had a number of years experience, both as a local minister, and as an evangelist. I am sure it will be worth while to hear him.

Next Sunday morning brother Copeland will be away, and brother E. O. Lafferty, will preach in his place. Brother Copeland will be back for the night service.

Bible Study, 10 o'clock a. m. and 7 p. m.

Frenching, 11 a. m. and 8 p. m.
We urge all of our young people to be present at the Young People's Meeting, as brother Copeland will be with you at that meeting.

FIRST PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH
Thos. Brewster, Minister

Sunday School as usual at 9:45 o'clock with classes for all ages. No Preaching Service this coming Sunday as the Pastor will be in Batesville, for a week teaching a course on Personal Work in connection with the Annual Training School of the Arkansas Woman's Synodical. All being well, preaching service will be resumed Sunday June 15.

The various circles of our Woman's Auxiliary will meet Monday at 4 p. m.

Our last men of the Church Meeting will be held Tuesday June 17. Details will be announced later.

In keeping with the Christian democratic Spirit of our Denomination, our people are urged to Worship with other Churches this next Sunday.

Spain Picks Up Nazi Survivors

Part of Bismarck Crew Saved by Spanish Cruiser

MADRID —(AP)— Foreign Minister Ramon Serrano Suner Friday announced that German Admiral Erich Raeder had thanked Spain for the action of the cruiser Canaria in taking German seamen out of the sea after the sinking of the Bismarck. This was the first intimation that any of the Bismarck men had been saved except about 100 picked up by British warships.

'Great American Broadcast' Opens at Saenger Sunday, Boasts Hit Songs

Against a background of tuneful melodies, "The Great American Broadcast" unfolds the gay, fascinating story of the courageous, talented people who first filled the air waves with song and laughter.

From the same studio which produced "Alexander's Ragtime Band," "Pan Alley," and others, the film "The Great American Broadcast" starring Alice Faye, John Payne, Jack Oakie, and Cesar Romero, opens on Sunday at the Saenger Theater.

Mindful of the fact that it is more difficult to reproduce the recent past on the screen to the satisfaction of all potential movie-goers, one year of research was spent before a single line of script was written. People familiar with the styles, customs and trends of 1919 and the years immediately following, will find "The Great American Broadcast," historically accurate, but in a most gay, entertaining way.

Those were the days of the crystal set, so every available crystal set west of the Rockies was purchased, and in addition, others were built to supplement these.

Celluloid collars, and high, wide cult, James Henry Moore, and George Ware Jr. have gone to Camp Pioneer near Mena, for a ten day stay. The boys are members of Troop 62 of the local Boy Scouts.

Mrs. W. R. Alexander and daughter, Martha Ann, will motor to Little Rock Saturday morning. They will be accompanied home by Miss Enola Alexander of the University of Arkansas at Fayetteville.

Mrs. Harold M. Stanley (Lena May Robertson) left Thursday for Detroit, Mich., where she will join Lt. Stanley in making their home.

Lt. Percy Ramsey is sailing Friday from San Francisco for the Philippine Islands, where he will serve in the U. S. Air corps. En route he will visit the Hawaiian Islands.

Mrs. John Keith Gregory and Mrs. Merlin Coop will leave Friday afternoon for a visit with their respective parents in Cherry Valley and Wynne.

Earl Lee Archer Jr. has returned from the University of Arkansas to spend the summer in the city.

Mrs. Ebb Johnson (Claudia Coop) left Wednesday night for Baltimore, Md. to join her husband, who is a naval reserve officer there.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cook have returned from a five day trip to Dallas.

Miss Juanita Gordon spent Wednesday and Thursday as the guest of Miss Mary Jackson in Columbus.

FOOTSTEPS IN THE FOG

BY ELINORE COWAN STONE

COPYRIGHT, 1941, NEA SERVICE, INC.

YESTERDAY: Angela's announcement that she and Stephan in the newsworld of the band riot, Stephan's explanation. But Stephan does not return to class and Deborah and Angela drive home to Cape Cod. There is a letter from Stephan. He explains his hurried departure, thanks her for her kindness. • To be continued.

STEPHAN RETURNS

CHAPTER V

THERE wasn't much more. The letter was written on hotel stationery, and Stephan had not suggested any address to which she might reply. . . . Deborah read it again and again.

What it all amounted to, she told herself in the end, was—just nothing—except that he remembered her as a chance acquaintance who had been kind to him that summer, and that he felt he owed her the courtesy of this non-committal note.

One afternoon shortly afterward, Deborah went for a long walk among the dunes beyond the town. . . . She had often dreamed of bringing Stephan here if he came to see her. . . . He would love the chilling wind, the fury of the waves. . . . Not quite safe to think about that yet, though—nor about Stephan.

She walked fast and furiously, as if she could run away from those forbidden thoughts which always crouched, waiting, in the back of her mind. . . . What, for instance, would all this mean to Stephan? Strange that he had not been recalled home!

Except to say casually one day that his visitor's permit in the United States would be good for several months more, he had never mentioned returning to Europe. It was one of those things he had not talked about. But the point of view of a soldier had crept out often in little involuntary ways.

TOWARD dusk Deborah struggled home through a stifling wind.

On the wind came the tang of the sea; and on her lips was the taste of brine. A low swell of racing dun-colored clouds seemed barely to clear the house-tops; and drops of moisture hung heavily on her tweed-covered shoulders and in her hair.

By the time Deborah reached the water front, the harbor was half curtains off. Soon—unless rain came instead—the fog would be, not just a curtain, but an opaque wall of gray.

Over the bulkhead that reinforced the little park across the street from the Lovett house, spray tossed flecks of spume across the sandy turf, while above, and hard straw hats were other items necessary for the accurate reconstruction of the recent past. The collars were supplied by a midwestern dealer who thought he had been stuck with an over-supply—and stuck he was until 20th Century-Fox bought his entire stock at a fancy price. On the matter of the straw hats, the studio was more fortunate. Several years ago the purchasing department picked up 200 of these snappy head pieces at a bargain price, and now they are not only used in 20th Century-Fox films, but also rented to other studios often enough to have covered the original investment five-fold.

The songs sung by Alice Faye in "The Great American Broadcast" were written by those master tunesmiths Mack Gordon and Harry Warren. For "The Great American Broadcast" they prepared "Long Ago Last Night," "Run Little Raindrop, Run," "I Take To You," "I've Got A Bone To Pick With You," "The Great American Broadcast," "Where You Are," and "It's All In A Lifetime."

The featured cast includes Mary Beth Hughes and many other outstanding performers.

Shortage of Pontiac Cars

Survey of Country to Be Made by Sales Manager

"I have never seen the automobile business as good as it is today," is what D. U. Bathrick, general sales manager of Pontiac Motor Division, says about the paradox that has gripped sales and sent him on a prolonged trip including every state in the Union and not ending until the third week in June.

During this six week trip Bathrick will have met all of the 4,000 Pontiac dealers in a series of twenty-four meetings. V. L. Murray, assistant general sales manager in charge of the East, has accompanied Bathrick thru the eastern part of the country, while V. A. Davison, assistant general sales manager in charge of the West, has been with him west of Chicago.

"Almost everyone seems to want new cars now," said Bathrick, "and I have tried on this trip to give our dealers an exact picture of the conditions that confront us now and also to get a first hand estimate of how much of the current volume of sales is being borrowed from next year."

Commenting on the present situation, Bathrick explained that what happened was that in January and February so many cars were delivered that inventories could not be built up to the customary level for spring. Then in March and April more cars were delivered than could be built, reducing existing inventories one third. The result is that during May and June deliveries cannot be greater than actual factory production. That will make May and June deliveries smaller than March and April, which he says "can't be helped."

"Although 25 per cent or more of our sales now may be to customers who ordinarily would not have bought until next year, I believe there will be buyers for all the cars that will be built."

"This belief is strengthened by the fact that more consumer goods than ever are being bought this year. Authorities say 40 per cent above 1939. Less money is being paid for them due to lower prices, even though the quality is higher. Also, labor is working fewer hours and receiving more pay."

"This, together with the defense program, is increasing the national income to the point where it will probably total from 80 to 90 billion dollars in 1941. And that should mean increased buying power for 1942."

"I realize that an increase of three and a half billions in income taxes will decrease buying on the part of many people, but it seems a safe assertion that a 90 billion dollar national income will send new buyers into the market absorbing the extra three and a half billions and have some left over."

"For those motorists who aren't sure about next year's automobiles, I can only say wait till they see them. It is not generally understood that the facilities and the men for making body and sheet metal dies were not needed in the defense program this past winter and spring."

"As to chassis and engines, I am sure that every Pontiac owner would be perfectly satisfied to continue with the same engine and chassis they had in 1940 and '41. Such things as our iron nickel alloy pistons that we have used for 15 years will be continued."

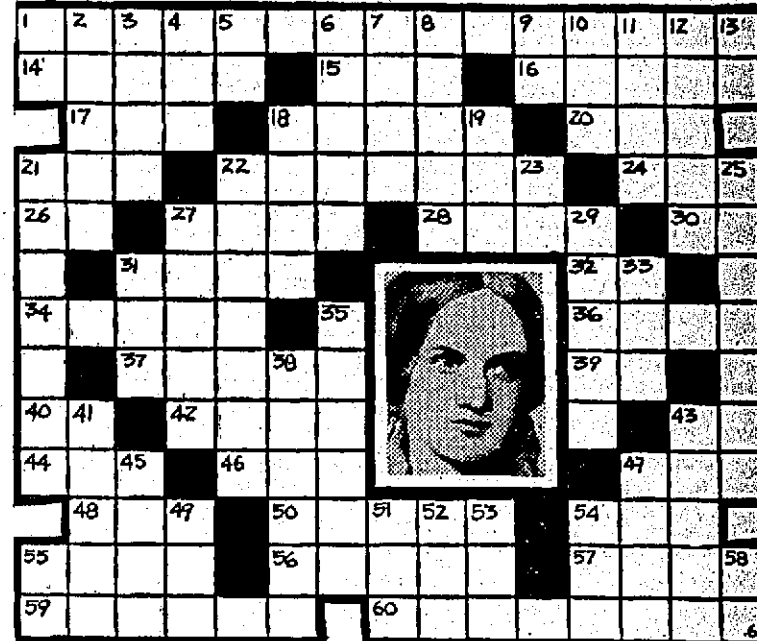

"This is not the time to discuss new cars, but I'll wager that every motorist will be pleasantly surprised when they appear next fall."

"Of course any predictions now are made with the full knowledge that during the present international crisis no one can be sure that his forecasts are correct. I realize full well that conditions can change very rapidly. Nevertheless, I believe that dealers who sell our product, as well as our Pontiac owners and prospective owners, are anxious for every opinion they can get.

"In matters of motor cars it is natural for them to look to some of us at the factories who are in a position to size up the situation all over the country and who are closer to the picture than the average buyer and dealer."

"Therefore, I hope to be of some service to our dealers and public in trying to clarify a situation which is the result of doing business under conditions vastly different from those of previous years."

WE, THE WOMEN

Girl Contemplating Marriage Today Should Be Ready to Support Herself

By RUTH MILLETT

The lucky girl today is the one who has education or special training that makes it possible for her to earn her own living.

For no young man still faced with the possibility of going into the army can feel sure of being able to support a wife.

He may have a good job today—but he doesn't know but what he'll be trading it for an army job in a few months.

No matter how much he wants to marry a girl, he can't very well ask her to marry him unless she is capable of supporting herself.

True, the girl who isn't self-supporting is being taken care of by her family. But families aren't quite that generous about supporting a daughter who has a husband. When they do, they often decide it gives them a right to have their say in the young folks plans and decisions.

And it isn't easy on a man's pride to have his wife's family responsible for her support.

In these times a girl has to be able to stand on her own two feet if she is to have a chance at marriage with a man her age.

Even if It Means Sacrifice. Parents of girls still in high school ought to think about that when they are wondering what to do with their daughters once the youngsters have their high school diplomas.

Even though they can't send a girl to college, most parents can see that she gets some kind of training that will fit her to earn her own living.

And if they possibly can give it to her, even though it means a sacrifice to them, they should. For the day is past when a girl could count on some one else for her support—first on her father and then her husband.

Today there is likely to be an interlude—and there is no telling how long it will last—when she will have to depend on herself.

The clothing leader then took charge. She gave sage and good suggestions on the study of cotton materials and cotton fashions for the home.

Miss Fletcher was with us this time and we sure did enjoy having her. She gave some very interesting thoughts on the improvements of garden and the extension of a fall garden. The council meeting was discussed and many more interesting facts. The club voted to have a special meeting at the home of Mrs. Leo Collier on Friday, May 28 to cut patterns to make Red Cross garments.

The members and visitors were then invited into the dining room where the table was filled with refreshments, of grape cherry punch and cookies. The club adjourned to meet with Mrs. Marion Sparks in June.

Bethel

A call meeting was held at the Bethel church on May 23. We talked and discussed Better Homes plans and handed our reports to the president. After our devotional service, Mrs. Zan Wilson led in prayer. The devotional was led by the president, Mrs. Addie Ashworth. We adjourned to meet on our regular club meeting day in June.

Clubs

Ozan-St. Paul

The Ozan-St. Paul Home Demonstration club met at the home of Mrs. Lewie Stuart on Friday, May 23, for a call meeting. Seven members were present. Better Homes were discussed and Mrs. Shirley Stuart read notes on ways to make Better Homes. The meeting adjourned with the reading of the creed.

Evening Shade

A special call meeting was held May 23, 1941, at the Evening Shade school house. Ten home demonstration club women were present. All Better Homes reports were turned into Mrs. Hacker. A group discussion was held. After the singing of the club song, we were dismissed by a word of prayer.

Oak Grove

The Oak Grove Home Demonstration club assembled at the home of Mrs. D. M. Collier Monday afternoon May 24. The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. S. B. Skinner. The club sang the song of the month. The devotional was led by the hostess Mrs. D. M. Collier. Minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary. The roll call was answered by showing a cotton article made.

The president presided and conducted the regular business meeting. Reports were handed in by all lead-

Rain, Rain, Stay Away

Open Air Concert Head Gambles on the Weather

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer

Mrs. Charles Guggenheimer, hand- some, gray-haired, blue-eyed chair- man of the New York Stadium Con- certs Committee, is one of Manhat- tan's biggest gamblers.

She gambles on the weather. As head of the open-air stadium con- certs she spends thousands of dol- lars on conductors, guest artists and musicians with the risk that their per- formance may be called off because of rain. The concerts, scheduled ev- ery evening for eight summer weeks, have to be paid for whether they take place or not. Rain before inter- mission means rain checks. The com- mittee never has carried rain in- surance.

So for the June-to-August season the weather is an ever threatening bogey to Mrs. Guggenheimer. No- body around her is allowed to men- tion rain. From her 57th street of- fice she keeps her eye on the weather clock on top of the Heckscher Build- ing, calls up the Weather Bureau a dozen times a day. As a last resort she calls for advice from her chauff- eur, George (Her friends say he al- ways says, "No, I don't think it will rain.")

Mrs. Guggenheimer is Mother of Music to millions of New Yorkers. Twenty-four years ago, during the World War, she launched the Stadium Concerts, chiefly for the benefit of soldiers and sailors. Since then, more than 300,000 persons a season have listened to symphonies under the stars and applauded such guest at- tractions as Jascha Heifetz, Efrem Zimbalist, Albert Spalding and John Charles Thomas.

Minnie Guggenheimer's inexhaust- ible energy, imagination and deter- mination have kept the concerts go- ing through boom, panic and depres- sion. She has badgered big busi- ness tycoons for support and has got- it; she has launched innovations and made them stick. She introduced the "Rocking Ball," Nelson Eddy and George Gershwin, added stage equipment which fills a score of trucks and ad- vanced dimmer stadium lights to create a more romantic atmosphere. (Her concerts are jammed with young people). This season, which begins June 19, she has arranged to have soldiers and sailors in uniform ad- mitted free on Saturday and Sunday nights.

During the season she is usually to be found at one of the front tables at the concert at least two nights a week, an ivory cigarette hold- er held between her ruby-nailed fin- gers. She wears simple clothes—often blue—and carries a little vial of old- fashioned smelling salts. During in- termissions she circulates among the critics and says: "Say something nice about me, please." Before she goes to bed she calls the box office to learn the evening's take. Next morn- ing she calls the weather bureau and starts all over again.

Everything was in readiness for the marriage ceremony, and both groom and best man had arrived at the church in plenty of time. The former, however, was uneasy.

"What's worryin' ye, Tamson?" asked the best man, tiptoeing up the aisle. "He's ye lost the ring?"

The other gazed at his friend's im- maculate attire and general air of gay bachelordom. Then he heaved a woe-ful sigh.

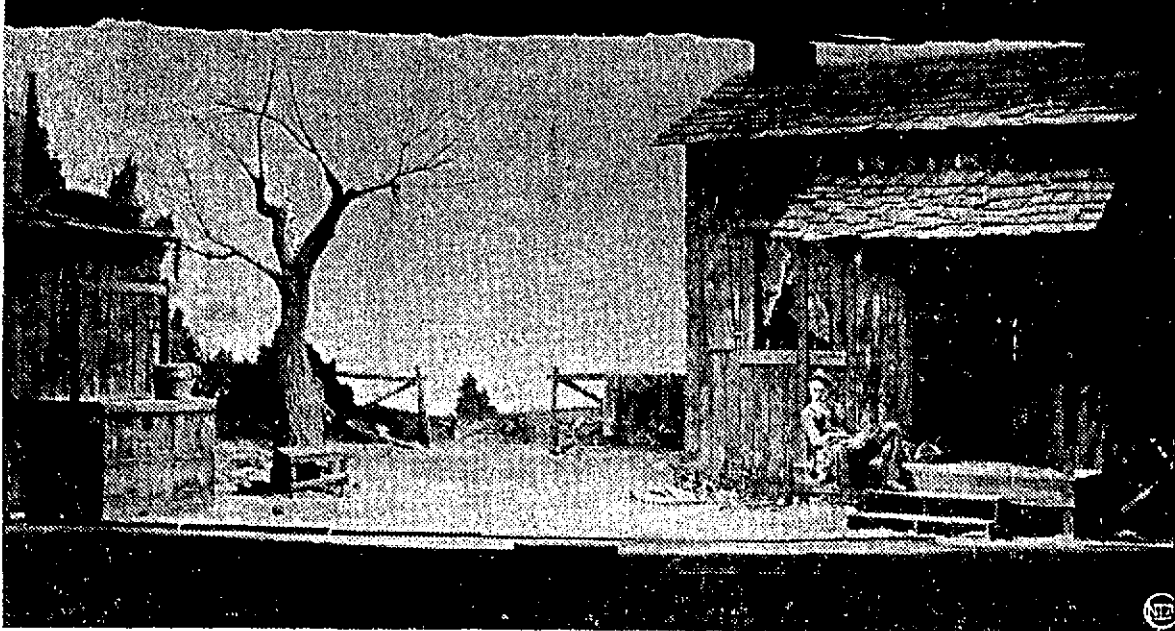

"Na," he answered rather respon- dently; "the ring's safe enough, man, but I've lost ma wild enthusiasm!"

A Clean Case for Beauty

First Rule for Beauty is Eight Hours Sleep

By BETTY CLARKE
AP Feature Service Writer

A fresh, American-beauty look is more than a happenstance, according to Olive Cawley, popular magazine cover girl. She has that alert, wide- awake type of beauty for which American girls are known.

She recommends a shining, "twice-clean" look. She has a regular regimen for beauty and the first rule is to get eight hours of sleep.

Her night and morning ritual is short but thorough. First is a cold cream bath for her face. Four gen- erous dabs of cream are spotted and spread upward and outward over her face right out to the roots of her hair. Especially thoroughly does she apply the cream around the eyes and nose. It is massaged off from the center of the face up and out, with a fresh section of tissue for each swing.

Miss Cawley uses vanishing cream, too, leaves a mask of it on for a full minute. Little flakes of dry skin come off when the mask is removed. The film that remains is sufficient for a powder base.

Then comes the actual making up for Miss Cawley's shining twice-clean face. Her powder is a rose brum- bled shade to match her skin. Deep, clear red lipstick, she says, is best for a brunet skin, especially for daytime. She prefers a deep blue-red for night.

To avoid the smeary look she out- lines her lips first and then fills in the outline. She dampens a fresh folded tissue with skin freshener (or cold water) and gently pats it over the powder.

Olivia, as do all debutantes, has a habit of carrying a tube of cold cream in her pocketbook to give her face a quick cleansing be- fore renewing makeup. It takes an extra minute, she admits, but it gets the fresher, shining look a girl should have, she says.

To Dress or Not to Dress?

Long Floaty Dresses Belong to Summertime

By AMY PORTER
AP Fashion Editor

When you have a choice between dressing and not dressing of a sum- mer evening, we hope you're woman enough to choose to dress.

Long, floaty dresses belong to sum- mertime, and this summer they're particularly tempting. There's a dress for every degree of formality, for every mood. There are sweet ones at $5, and magnificent dazzlers at as much as you want to pay.

Country-ish and hostess frocks are styled so you can't possibly feel too dressed up in them, even if the men wear business suits—ginghams made almost like sports frocks, except that their long skirts lend enchantment; dotted swisses and lawns with modest sleeves and immodest necklines, frocks of the type we used to call dirndl and now call "foreign-look dresses."

Charm Comes Ahead of Style

Such dresses you buy for their gen- uine summery charm, without much concern about style.

But high style is abundantly avail- able in more formal evening wear. The tapering look is making headway in long-sleeve dinner dresses. Hugo sleeves, pleated or puffed, and a bloused top make the narrow skirt look narrower. Slits to the knee are needed for walking room. This is the slim silhouette you heard talk of, but seldom saw, last winter. It is grow- ing in importance and by next fall probably will be accepted by every- one.

Blazing colors in rich fabrics will be seen here and there on summer evenings. A satin dress, for example, with horizontal stripes in turquoise blue and tulip red, and worn with long pale blue gloves. Equally striking are black and white gowns—white mous- seline banded in black lace, worn with black lace mitts extending above the elbow.

Another Advance Notice

Tiered dresses, again prophetic of fall style, are increasingly popular. They may have three or four tiers, or only a peplum. You'll see them in striped rayon jersey, in white lace, black lace, tiny floral prints.

A once-in-a-while style that may ap- pear to you—it certainly appeals to men—is ballet slippers with evening frocks. Have them dyed to match your frocks or to contrast sharply with white. You'll feel light and graceful, you'll look all-out feminine.

NEW YORK — The oldest landmark on Broadway, the boulevard of brev- ity, came down, "Tobacco Road" closed.

The epitaph over its battered re- mains, interred in Walton's Store- house, will read: Here lies the thea- ter's all-time endurance king. Born Dec. 4, 1933. Died May 31, 1941. Act: 3180 Broadway performances. ("Abie's Irish Rose," previous marathon champ played but a paltry 2327 performanc- es.)

Was Panned by Critics

Prohibition was still the law of the land in that half-for-gotten era when scenarist Jack Kirkland brought to Broadway his adaptation of Er- kine Caldwell's ultra-realistic tale of sordid life among the Georgia share- croppers. America was 'doing its part' under the wildly flapping wings of the NRA Blue Eagle. Von Hinden- burg was president of Germany. John Dillinger was still at large. So was the unknown kidnaper of the Lind- bergh baby. The Dionnnes were just a poor French-Canadian family.

The critics panned the show un- mercifully. It limped along for sev- eral weeks, seemingly destined for oblivion. Then a New York newspa- per ran an editorial, "Tobacco Road — An Important Play," which called it "grand entertainment." The rest is history.

Some Notes For Statisticians

Sidelights on history:

Over 2,500,000 people paid nearly $2,- 000,000 to see "Tobacco Road" on Broadway. During its 6360 hours of playing time, the starving Lester fam- ily ate $2,680 the star, turnips, gingerly washed and drunk and played with 21,800 gallons of water, lain around in 65 tons of soil.

Dude Lester has bounced to shreds 42 squash balls against the rickety family shack (which recently had to be reinforced because of termites). He has broken to pieces 12 auto fen- ders, 8 auto headlights.

No one in the cast has remained continuously, although Banker Ed- win Walter has. He has foreclosed Je- tter Lester's mortgage for seven and a half years excepting a week's role in an ill-starred farce last win- ter. There have been five Jetter Les- ters—Henry Hull, James Barton, James Bell, Eddie Garr, and, at pre- sent, Will Geer.

One "Tobacco Road" enthusiast has seen the play 33 times.

Grossed Over $6,000,000

It has been the road companies which have brought "Tobacco Road" much of its more spectacular fame. Five cities brought it into the spot- light by banning it. It has been sued 35 times, won 32. It has been de- nounced in Congress.

Suits and bans and denunciations have only served to stimulate and increase interest in the play. Road companies have played over 300 cities in 42 states, pushing the play's total gross over $6,000,000. Often it has played a city more than once. Columbus, O., has seen it seven dif- ferent times. Its sole flop was in Lon- don.

Wonder Women of Science

Wanda Farr Solves the Cellulose Riddle

By ADELAIDE KERR
AP Feature Service Writer
STAMFORD, Conn. — One hot August day in 1939 a slender, dany- eyed woman bent over a microscope in a Yonkers chemical laboratory, tense with interest.

Wanda Farr knew she had the an- swer to one of chemistry's greatest riddles—the origin of cellulose. It was a discovery big enough to set the science world on its ear. But that night she simply said to her six-foot son: "Well, I've found where cellu- lose comes from."

Science had probed the mystery for years. Cellulose helps form the walls of plant cells and thus the structural framework of plants—which in turn manufacture food for themselves, an- imals and men. Science uses cellulose as the key product in a billion dollar industry which makes hundreds of things ranging from rayon to plastic brushes.

But, though man has harnessed cellu- lose for new uses, he can't reproduce the thing itself. He never had been able to learn where it came from till Mrs. Farr made her discovery.

To appreciate what a hard job that was, you'll have to use your imagina- tion and do a magnifying job millions of times greater than the highest pow- ered laboratory lens.

Think of the little plant cell as a big room, filled with a jelly-like sub- stance called protoplasm. Imagine semi-transparent balls filled with the same protoplasm, floating in the room. Now see these balls burst and re- lease, from the protoplasm within, thousands of tiny crystals which slide over to the walls and stick there to form those walls (made of cellulose, remember). The cellulose, then, comes from the protoplasm manufactured within those floating balls in the cell.

Now that you know it, it sounds relatively simple. It took Mrs. Farr years to learn it. In 1933 she discovered with a high powered lens the crystals floating in the proto- plasm. They seemed to burst into be- ing before her eyes. But she couldn't see where they came from.

Then she hit upon the scheme of switching her microscope from cotton fiber, which she had been examining, to a Bermuda sea plant whose cells are relatively large. She saw the balls bursting and releasing the crys- tals. Excitedly she switched her microscope back to the cotton fiber and discovered the same process—and

Auto Vacuum Aids Anglers

To many the call of the open road also means the call of the open water. The automobile and good roads have brought thousands of beautiful lakes and streams within reach of the vacationist or the week-end. Fishing seasons throughout the country are opening, and these young people were among the first to seek their favorite stream. They carry their own boat, lashed to the top of their Chevrolet, and held securely with a new vacuum-grip holding device actuated by vacuum power from the motor. Note the tube connecting boat rack with motor vacuum.

thus the origin of cellulose. The balls hadn't been apparent to her in cotton fiber because they looked so much like the protoplasm in which they floated, and because they were so tiny.

Mrs. Farr made her discovery at the Boyce Thompson Institute for Plant Research in Yonkers. Scientists say that her work opens the dazzling possibility of reproducing cellulose. Mrs. Farr wouldn't say a word on that subject when I talked to her at the research laboratory of the American Cyanamid Co. at Stamford, Conn., where she now is at work. But she did say this:

"Each new identification helps, in some measure, to lessen our profound ignorance of how both plant cells and animal cells are able to live and grow. Once we know how to keep in better health, how to grow plants more ef- fectively, and a good many other things.

Mrs. Farr is a woman of handsome, distinguished appearance. She was, when I saw her dressed in a simple, tailored suit, and her hair was close- cropped. She didn't dream of be- coming one of the world's greatest women scientists when she married Professor Clifford Farr of the Uni- versity of Iowa after her graduation from college in Ohio. She took some chemistry courses because the subject fascinated her, and she turned out to be a whiz. In time, she was invited to do some hospital cancer research in St. Louis. After her husband's death in 1928, she came to the Boyce Thomp- son Institute to begin her cellulose re- search.

She thinks women make good sci- entists.

"They have as many natural at- tributes as men," she says. "They're as practical and as matter of fact. I think they have better poker faces than men too—and in science you need a poker face."

Lamb for the June Bride

Formula for Carry- ing Roast Sunday to Tuesday

AP Feature Service

A leg of lamb is a big investment for a small-family dinner unless you have a plan for handling the in- evitable leftover problem. Here's a formula to carry a lamb roast from Sunday through Tuesday—a timely tip for the June bride.

Sunday's Lamb Is Golden Brown
Proper cooking will turn out a golden brown roast. A slow tempera- ture prevents shrinkage. The leg should be placed with cut side up and skin side down on a rack in an open roasting pan. Season with salt and pepper. The oven should be at about 300. You should allow 30 to 35 minutes per pound for roasting. Garnish with six pear halves filled with mint jelly.

Monday's Lamb Is Ringed Around
Creamed lamb and peas in noodle ring make a dish that saves work time and dishwashing. And it tastes fine, too. Cook a package of wide no- dles as directed on the package, drain and rinse. Combine with four tablespoons of melted butter and put into a greased one-quart ring mold. Set the mold in a pan of hot water for 10 minutes. To cream the lamb and peas, you first cut enough cold time in inch cubes to fill three cups. Sauce a sliced onion in butter until tender, add two cups of left-over gravy and season with one-half teaspoon of Worcestershire sauce, salt and pepper. Add the meat and a half cup of cooked peas. Cook slowly until heat- ed through. Unmold the noodle ring and fill the center with lamb. Garn- ish with about three sliced green pep- pers, and six slices of pineapple saut- ed lightly in butter. (Six servings). If there is no gravy, add four tablespoons of flour to the butter after cooking the onion. Stir until it is browned. Add two cups of water in which a bouillon cube has been dissolved. Stir constantly and cook until thick and smooth.

Tuesday's Lamb—Last in a Salad
Lamb goes nicely into your bowl. Pile 2½ cups of diced cold lamb in the center. Arrange 2 cups of diced celery around the lamb. Repeat, us- ing one-half cup of chopped green pepper. Cut an apple in half, core and slice cross-wise. Place slices around the edge of the bowl, peel side up and extending about one- eighth of an inch above the edge. Serve with mayonnaise to which has been added the chopped fresh mint.
